

Bradley Vatr

Bradley Vatr has worked at AIG in various capacities for over seven years. Brad is currently the Assistant Vice President in the Cyber / Media / Technology Group at AIG. In this role, he manages a group of analysts and oversees their handling of security and privacy, crisis management, technology, media and internet claims. He engages customers through account meetings; leads meetings with insureds, brokers and underwriters to discuss claim trends, account servicing and claim exposure. Brad also serves as the AVP for AIG's Kidnap and Ransom claims group.

Brad joined AIG in 2008, after working as a litigator in state and federal courts for a several large New York City law firms for over six years. He graduated from Villanova University with a B.A. in English Literature, and obtained his J.D. from Fordham University School of Law.