Josh is a clinical risk manager, bioethicist, executive healthcare leader, and professor with more than 25 years of healthcare experience. He received his Doctor of Health Science and Master of Health Law degrees at Nova Southeastern University and is currently a Master of Bioethics candidate at Harvard Medical School. He has a broad base of experience that includes academic medical centers, community hospitals, community mental health and in-patient psychiatric care, physician office and ambulatory settings, accreditation and regulation, clinical ethics, and corporate compliance. Some of his academic and professional interests include relationships between health law and medical ethics, moral distress, professionalism and its impact on patient safety, social media and its impact on the practice of healthcare, and LGBT healthcare.

He has achieved the designations of Certified Professional in Patient Safety (CPPS) and Certified Professional in Healthcare Risk Management (CPHRM), was appointed a Distinguished Fellow at the American Society of Healthcare Risk Management (DFASHRM), and was an inaugural Healthcare Ethics Consultant-Certification (HEC-C) recipient from the American Society for Bioethics and Humanities. He is the former chapter president of the Southern California Association for Healthcare Risk Management, has chaired committees for the American Society of Healthcare Risk Management (ASHRM), and is on faculty for ASHRM. Additionally, he has written and spoken internationally on topics of healthcare disparities, social media in healthcare, LGBT healthcare, and medical ethics.
